"Rebellion against the law is in the nature of treason. The law deserves our obedience; it alone can reconcile the warring interests of all and blend into one harmonious union the discordant materials of which society is composed."—Judge William Gaston.

World Government Plan

Can the United States government such as we know it as a union of 50 states be obliterated and America then become just a member state in a world government? Robert S. Allen, in his nationally syndicated column, "Inside Washington", said recently this is where we are heading and he quoted a powerful authority for this prediction.

He is Richard N. Gardner, professor of Law and International Organizations at Columbia University and former Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for international organizations during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

Allen said Gardner is a leader of the world government movement and a close associate of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger who understands the thinking and method of operation of Kissinger. Gardner used a little publicized speech recently in Washington to spell out the new strategy change used by Kissinger for the followers of the world movement.

The switch being employed by Kissinger is an indirect approach to create a world government. The old direct approach has been found to be useless and generated too much opposition, according to Gardner. Gardner explained the new "house of world order" will be built from the bottom rather than from the top.

Explaining this move, Gardner said it will look like a "booming, buzzing, confusion, but an end run around national sovereignty, eroding it piece-by-piece is likely to get us world order faster than the old-fashioned frontal assault." He added that even as nations resist appeals for world government and the surrender of national sovereignty, economic and political interests are forcing them to establish more far-ranging institutions to manage their mutual "interdependence."

Gardner reminded his followers that in his first press conference as Secretary of State, Kissinger said the U.S. was entering a new phase of foreign policy and this would involve the building of new international structures for world order and peace.

Gardner said "Kissinger will begin looking for new solutions through more effective international institutions at the global and regional levels. This will represent key elements of "planetary planning and planetary management on very specific problems where the facts of 'interdependence' forces nations to abandon unilateral decision-making for multilateral process."

Gardner said this represents a giant step toward their ultimate goal of world government. An example of this, Gardner said, are the negotiations now underway to reform the International Monetary System and the coming World Population Conference.

The International Monetary Fund conference is designed to phase out the dollar standard and in doing so, the IMF will emerge with unprecedented powers of control. And the U.N. peace-keeping troops now in the Mideast represents the model for the future, Gardner said.

We do not support any movement that will involve the United States in one-world government.

Destroy our national sovereignty? Change independence to interdependence? This is happening all around you now.
